THE PRESIDENT'S CONDITION ON SUNDAY

EXECUTIVE MANSION, July 24 10 15 — The president's physicians who met at 8 o'clock are holding a very prolonged session this morning. Whatever conclusion they have arrived at relative to the president's condition and symptoms have not yet been divulged. No further details can be obtained concerning the progress of the patient's case during the night other than that his temperature this morning is about normal and his pulse 98. It cannot be ascertained at this writing what effect the operation had upon the patient, or what his condition is at the present time. The surgeons are now in consultation in their own room, and a bulletin will probably be issued very soon.

AN OPERATION TO RELEASE THE PUS

EXECUTIVE MANSION, 10 45 a. m., July 24 —Information has just been received from the president's chamber that the examination which commenced about 8 o'clock has just been concluded. It is understood that at the instance of Dr. Agnew, an incision was made in the president's body a few inches from the original wound for the purpose of reaching what is thought to be a pus cavity in the trace of the wound. After the operation was performed a drain tube was inserted and a small quantity of pus, it is said, soon made its appearance. It can't be ascertained at this writing, what effect the operation had upon the patient or what his condition is at the present time. The surgeons are now in consultation in their own room and a bulletin will probably be issued very soon.

A BAD NIGHT, BUT BETTER IN THE MORNING

EXECUTIVE MANSION, Washington, July 24. The president got no sleep after midnight last night. He was very restless and uneasy. Dr. Agnew performed an operation this morning, and he found the pus accumulated at the first cut. The operation caused a flow of pus which has much relieved the president.

MRS. GARFIELD IS ANXIOUS

WASHINGTON, July 24.—Mrs. Kirkwood, in reply to an inquiry, said Mrs. Garfield was manifesting less anxiety this evening than at noon, and was evidently easier in her mind.

THE COUNTER OPENING

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The counter opening is about three inches below the wound. It was necessary to cut to the depth of about one inch before the connection with the original wound was complete. A local anæsthetic was administered, covering the parts operated upon, which obviated the experience of any pain. Shortly after the operation the patient partook of nourishment with a relish and expressed himself as feeling much relieved by the operation.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, July 24—10 50 a. m. —The president bore the operation this morning very well. His pulse is now 112.

DR. BLISS TALKS

EXECUTIVE MANSION, 12 p. m.—Dr. Bliss, during the course of a conversation in relation to the operation which was performed on the president this morning, said that during his examination yesterday he discovered that a slight sack or pus cavity had formed immediately at a turn in the track of the bullet, and at once decided the proper thing to do was to make an incision which would straighten the track and permit the pus to discharge more freely. It was determined, however, that before performing the operation it would be best to notify the consulting surgeons, and request their attendance, which was done forthwith. The formation of a pus cavity, the doctor said, is a very ordinary occurrence in similar instances. There is no doubt in his mind that the incision will tend to lessen the frequency and severity of the rigors. He says however, that the patient may have some more slight chills. "The result of the examination this morning and the president's present condition," continued Doctor Bliss, "are reassuring. When I left, fifteen minutes ago, he was sleeping quietly. During the operation his pulse reached about 120. Since then there has been a falling off of about fifteen beats. The president did not move a muscle while the operation was being performed and it was not found necessary to administer any stimulants.

THE PRESIDENT'S WEAKNESS

CHICAGO, July 24.—Washington specials say: Dr. Hepburn being asked whether the president was strong enough to resist such a shock as two chills, said: "The president is certainly not strong. He is very weak indeed. He is not as strong as he is generally supposed to be. He has to be lifted on sheets and whenever we wish to give him a glass of water, we have to raise his head. Certainly the president is not strong."

HOW BLOOD WAS OBTAINED

The physicians at their examination this evening inserted a flexible catheter into the wound and passed it against what had been an obstruction and had prevented its further progress on previous occasions. With a very slight pressure they were able to make an incision and apparently opened a closed pocket whereupon there came quite freely a discharge of pus of a greenish color, showing by its character that it had been gathering for some time. There were however no evidences of pyæmia, and the doctors do not apprehend that it exists. Immediately after this operation the president, who had been very restless and in pain, was much relieved and all the symptoms became more favorable, there being a lowering in all the figures of the observation.

ABUSING THE DOCTORS

The wise men began at once to attack the doctors. One prominent gentleman said: "There has been too much politics and newspaper reading in the sick room. The president should be kept perfectly quiet and not allowed to talk about outside matters. I have no doubt that the increased fever last night and chill this morning were due in a great measure to the mental excitement which the president has undergone. It was wrong to tell him about the New York elections, and set him thinking about such matters."

Others condemned the statement and said: "These doctors were entirely wrong about the location of the bullet. There is no doubt the attendants of the president has been too confident of his recovery and allowed him more privileges than his condition warranted. They made a mistake last Sunday in allowing him to eat such a hearty breakfast, and ever since they have restricted his diet. The talk about the necessity of finding the bullet has taken a fresh start. Professor Bell, who has been conducting the experiments with the view of ascertaining the location of the bullet by electricity, said yesterday afternoon that the apparatus was nearly completed and that they had been able to detect the presence of lead at a distance of three inches. He thinks with improved apparatus the distance can be increased."

THE FEELING IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The condition of the president to-day was the source of much anxiety, and in the absence of official information later than the morning bulletins, all sorts of wild and unfounded rumors were in circulation. Since the evening bulletins, however, a more hopeful feeling has prevailed, and the excitement of the day has subsided. The attending surgeons, to-night, do not hesitate to say that there has been a substantial, and they believe permanent, improvement in the president's condition this afternoon. Dr. Hepburn believes that the crisis of the disturbance caused by the formation of the pus cavity has passed and that there is now every reason to expect an abatement if not an entire disappearance of the unfavorable symptoms of the last thirty-six hours.

THE DRAINAGE TUBE

In explaining the nature of the operation performed by Dr. Agnew this morning and the necessity for it, Dr. Hepburn made in substance, the following statement: The direction taken by the ball after it entered the body was forward and slightly downward until it struck one of the ribs. It was thence deflected still further downward, and a little to the right, so as to make acute angles with the line of the back. In other words, when the probe was introduced into the wound to the depth of three or three and a half inches, its direction was such that the inner end was only about an inch and a half from the outside of the body. At a point lower down, the examination which was made in the presence of Doctors Agnew and Hamilton, this morning, showed that a pus cavity had formed in the track of the ball and beyond the point where it glanced from the rib, and that this cavity could be reached by a direct incision three inches below the mouth of the wound. It was decided at once to perform the operation. No anæsthetics were used, but the part to be operated upon was benumbed by a spray of ether, and a wide cut was made into the pus cavity, which was reached at a depth of little more than an inch. With the aid of a probe and a pair of forceps, a drainage tube, which is a small, flexible tube of rubber perforated with holes, was then introduced into the wound made by the ball. And after being carried through the pus cavity was brought out through the newly made incision. One end of the tube then projected from the cut made by the surgeon's knife and the other from the mouth of the original wound. As the pus oozed into the tube through the perforations it could escape from either end, and was repeatedly washed out with a solution of carbolic acid and water, which was thrown through the tube in a stream. The discharge which followed the opening of the pus cavity, was entirely satisfactory to the surgeons and was soon followed by relief to the patient. The tube has been left as it was originally placed and will remain there for the present. If the wound discharges freely through the new opening, the tube may perhaps be drawn from the old one in order to allow the latter to heal. The incision made to-day is almost line with the direct part of the wound, and it is thought the pus will escape through it without the obstruction which impeded its outflow along the track of the ball and which caused the pus cavity. In reply to a question whether another pus cavity is likely to form and bring about a recurrence of the alarming symptoms of yesterday, Dr. Hepburn said: "I can't answer positively but as the pus now has free egress I do not think it probable that another cavity will form."

NO BLOOD POISONING

Being asked whether there were or had been symptoms in the president's case of blood poisoning, Dr. Hepburn said: "None whatever. The rigors, of course, may be a symptom of various other complications and does not point to pyæmia in the present case. The pus continues healthy and the characteristic symptoms of pyæmia are wanting. You may say upon my authority that no indications of blood poisoning have been observed and we have no reason to expect any." In conclusion Dr. Hepburn said the president's condition and symptoms to-night are more favorable and encouraging than at any time since yesterday morning.

OTHER SYMPTOMS

WASHINGTON, July 24.—The president rested tolerably well during the afternoon dozing frequently. He was given beef tea at intervals during the day and took it with some relish. But before leaving for Philadelphia this afternoon Dr. Agnew said that he felt hopeful to tell the president that he was encouraged to believe the operation performed would be followed with good results. Dr. Hamilton remains until Dr. Agnew returns. Mrs. Garfield went out driving this evening with Miss Mollie and Miss Sheldon. The surgeons dressed the wound at 6 o'clock and found a good flow of pus discharging from the new opening, today. As is known the bullet in entering the president struck a rib and deflected downward. Dr. Agnew in performing the operation this morning pushed the knife in about three inches below the wound so that the point of the knife entered the track of the wound several inches from the mouth of the wound and the new opening made by Dr. Agnew went below. It is through this opening made with the knife that the flow of pus is now passing. The doctors feel very much encouraged at the president's condition to-night. He has not had a return of the chilly sensations to-day. No anæsthetic was administered.

TOO MUCH EXCITEMENT

CHICAGO, July 24.—A Washington special says: It is officially stated that the increase of pulse was due to over excitement, and that the return of the fever was only temporary and it was said the political news of yesterday the election of Conkling's successor and the death of Justice Clifford, had an exciting effect upon the president. Just here it may be well to state that the story is not true which has gained circulation that the president yesterday upon hearing that Judge Lapham was elected as successor to Conkling said: "Thank God." A gentleman who was in the sick room and who heard the dispatch announcing the result read to the president, said the president only said, "Well, I am glad it is all over. I am sorry for Conkling. I should like to give him a foreign mission."

MONDAY AFTERNOON DISPATCHES

Interviews with the Surgeons Who give Cheerful Reports

BULLETIN NO. 1

EXECUTIVE MANSION, July 25, 7 a. m.—Dr. Bliss says he feels very much gratified at the condition he finds his patient in. The president says he had no chill and slept well during the night. A casual examination just made shows little or no fever and his pulse is at 98.

BULLETIN NO. 2

EXECUTIVE MANSION, 10 45 a. m., July 25. The president's condition continues favorable and at this hour he is very comfortable. No material change has occurred in his pulse or temperature since the last official bulletin. He has partaken of lime water and milk alternately with meat juice this morning with a relish. When the wound was dressed the cotton was found well saturated with pus of a healthy character. The surgeons say there has been a gradual and very satisfactory discharge of pus ever since the incision was made.

BULLETIN NO. 3

WASHINGTON, July 25, 11 a. m.—The president has had no rigor since morning and is doing well. Secretary Blaine at 8 30 a. m. cabled Lowell as follows: The president passed a comfortable night free from chills. His pulse and temperature are much reduced.

BULLETIN NO. 4

WASHINGTON, July 25, 11 15 a. m.—The president's condition, as far as can be judged, seems about the same as before the relapse except that it has left him weaker. He seems once more to be in the way of improvement instead of going down hill as was the case Saturday.

NO RECENT CHILL

EXECUTIVE MANSION, noon, July 25. Thirty six hours have now elapsed since the president had the last chill, and there are as yet no indications of another. With the exception of a slightly increased weakness caused by the relapse of Saturday, his condition does not differ materially from that of the early part of last week. The surgeons are now assembling for the noon consultation and within the next hour an official report will probably be made of the patient's pulse and temperature.

CONFIDENCE OF THE SURGEONS

LONDON, July 25.—A special Washington dispatch says: Dr. Hamilton, of New York, paid a very high compliment to Dr. Bliss. He said his management in the case throughout was absolutely above criticism and he was entitled to the warmest praise. Both of the consulting physicians think occasion to day complimentary to the surgeon in charge in the highest possible degree.

POSTMASTER JAMES'S DISPATCH

NEW YORK, July 25.—Postmaster General James telegraphs Postmaster Pearson from Washington at 1 o'clock that the president's condition has decidedly improved.

MALARIA AT THE WHITE HOUSE

NEW YORK, July 25.—The Tribune's Washington special says: Four of the persons in attendance upon the president have been seized with malaria since he was confined to the White House. This is the plausible result of congressional inactivity of serious importance now because the constant doses of quinine alone will probably ward off some trouble from the president but are unfortunately not sure to do so. When congress meets next winter we shall doubtless see something done about the Potomac flats and the sanitary condition of the White House but meanwhile malaria brings a heavy penalty when it endangers the health and even lives of the president and his family.

WHAT CHUMP THINKS

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Chump the president's nurse says his appearance to-day shows improvement. His features are more natural and lifelike. The redness that over spread them yesterday has disappeared. Chump thinks the relapse set the president back about three days on his recovery.

DR. AGNEW HOPEFUL

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 25.—Dr. Agnew returned from Washington late this evening very tired and complaining of the heat and fatigue of his rapid journey. Before answering questions he asked for the latest bulletins of the president's condition and being told that they were favorable, expressed relief. The president's stomach was so sensitive it was not deemed advisable to put him under the influence of anæsthetics. He bore his pain with fortitude and by the flow of pus showed that the operation was the thing to be done. The abscess was caused by the fractured rib. The new opening is large enough to prevent any accumulation at that point hereafter and will be kept open as long as necessary. "I don't feel apprehensive," said Dr. Agnew, "of any recurrence of the difficulty at that point. The rapid improvement in his pulse and temperature just after the operation showed that the relieved abscess was the source of the damaging symptom. I am still hopeful of the president's recovery and see no reasons to be disturbed."

MORE CHEERFUL FEELING

Favorable Reports From the Attending Surgeons

WASHINGTON, July 25.—The feeling which prevailed yesterday at the White House and throughout the city disappeared this morning. There is no better barometer to indicate the president's condition than the looks of those about the White House and the general air that the place wears. By them one can tell at once whether matters are favorable or not without asking questions. This morning everybody was bright and cheerful, a reflect from the sick room and the opinions of the doctors. Nobody was gloomy, nobody was anxious, nobody wore the anxious looks of yesterday. This change had its effect that there was little inquiry as to the president's condition, and once more the doctors came from the sick room without being seized by thirty or more people who have been waiting for just such an opportunity to hear from the sick bed. Doctors Hepburn and Bliss were with the president all night. They took little naps as the president slept soundly.

DR. BLISS'S OPINION

Dr. Bliss said this morning as he came out of the sick room, "Everything begins to look bright again." When asked about the appearance of the wound when dressed this morning he said: "There had been a good discharge of pus. The flow had not been great before the pus cavity was formed. The matter collected for twenty four hours was then drawn off, the only discharge in the meantime being a small continuous flow. The discharge this morning though not large was satisfactory and healthy. The president passed a very good night getting a good deal of sleep after 12 o'clock, and resting comfortably before that hour. There was a little fever but not marked as compared with the night before. When the cotton was removed from the wound this morning it was found to be saturated with pus showing the continuous discharge that was so satisfactory before the formation of the pus cavity. The president is now taking lime water and milk with beef juice over toast, at regular intervals."

DR. HEPBURN'S REMARKS

Dr. Hepburn came out of the White House this morning and being questioned, said: "The president is doing admirably.—He has had a very good night and everything is just as satisfactory as could be expected."

THE OTHER DOCTORS

Dr. Hamilton was at the dressing of the wound this morning before the bulletin was issued. He said the president's condition was satisfactory. He will leave to-night. Dr. Agnew will be with the president from now until the indications are such as to show there is no necessity for his further presence.

"DOING WELL"

At noon the president's condition was still favorable and he was very comfortable. No material change has occurred in his pulse or temperature since the last official bulletin. The surgeons say there has been a gradual and very satisfactory discharge of pus ever since the incision was made. Dr. Bliss said at 12 o'clock that everything shows that the danger from the stoppage of pus had passed until the president was doing as well as before the relapse occurred.

HISTORY OF THE RELAPSE

Dr. Boynton the Family Physician's Account

NEW YORK, July 25.—The Tribune's Washington correspondent interviewed Dr. Boynton, the president's family physician last night who said: "We are feeling very good to-night. Things have not been very well for three days and the president has evidently not been as well. After dressing the wound he has been found to be very much exhausted. Night before last he was pretty well tired out after the evening dressing and a high fever came on, very likely he had a slight chill in his sleep but we did not know it. We are very certain of it now and he had a restless bad night. He waked up in the morning feeling very weak and rather badly and before noon he had that chill. It was a severe one—he shook for a long time. That was accompanied by vomiting a number of times throwing up green matter. Of course his pulse ran up. At one time it reached 132. His temperature reached 104, which was rather alarming. We of course looked for an accumulation of pus and abscess somewhere. The fever was followed by profuse sweating. In the afternoon an other chill came on, this one followed by exhaustion and accompanied by vomiting. Coming to dress the wound at night an accumulation of pus was discovered in the back forming a sack running back toward the backbone three inches long, and perhaps three inches wide. The president was greatly relieved at once. So much so that Doctors Agnew and Hamilton did not think it best to see him. Last night I sat up with him until about 12 o'clock and then went to bed. Shortly after I left him he had another severe chill with vomiting and other serious symptoms. He then began to perspire profusely and this continued until nearly 9 o'clock this morning. At 9 o'clock there was an examination and it was determined to open the wound. When the operation was performed he never flinched nor moved and nothing was given him in the nature of an anæsthetic. Probes were thrust down through the old wound to the bottom of the pocket and the surgeons cut against that, and of course it required a good deal of examination. Fingers were pushed down into the incision and the rib restored to its place a tube, as long as your little finger, pushed through one end in the old wound and the other in the new. From the explorations made with the finger, all the members were in good condition as far as they were reached. They appeared to be very solid."

"How do you feel doctor in regard to the general outlook for his recovery?" asked the reporter.

"Very well indeed. The presence of two surgeons is very encouraging in itself. The confidence and self possession manifested in all their operations are very reassuring and I look for a constant improvement from this time. He may have a recurrence of chills and alternate symptoms, but we feel that he ought to get well and in all probability will. He will have some little set backs he could hardly help that. We felt relieved yesterday as soon as the accumulation of pus was found. If it had not been found matters might have been much more serious."

"What food is the president taking now?"

"Nothing but beef extract. All milk diets have been dropped entirely, he threw it up as fast as he took it. It may be his stomach is gouty and bad."

LAST NIGHT'S DISPATCHES.

Full—Particulars About the President's Condition

BULLETIN NO. 5

EXECUTIVE MANSION, July 25, 7 p. m.—The president has done well during the day. His afternoon fever did not come on until after three o'clock. It was somewhat higher than yesterday but there has been no chill. At noon his pulse was 104, temperature 98 4, respiration 20. At 7 p. m. his pulse was 110, temperature 101 8, respiration 24.

(Signed) D. W. BLISS,
J. K. BARNES,
J. J. WOODWARD,
JOHN F. HAMILTON.

BULLETIN NO. 6

EXECUTIVE MANSION, July 25, 10 30 p. m.—The condition of the president to-night is said by Dr. Bliss to be in every way favorable and encouraging. This afternoon fever which came on about 3 o'clock has nearly subsided and the patient's pulse and temperature are both at this hour below 100. He is sleeping quietly and all the surgeons have left the Mansion except Drs. Bliss and Woodward who are on duty.

EXPERIMENTS TO FIND THE BULLET

WASHINGTON, July 25.—It is learned that Dr. Agnew is very anxious to locate the bullet and remove it if possible. He experimented with Professor Bell's electrical apparatus on an old soldier, but did not agree with electricians that it had located the bullet in the veteran's body. Some physicians begin to think the ball may not have touched the liver, but have lodged in the muscles of the lower part of the back.

PYÆMIA NOT APPREHENDED

Dr. Bliss in conversation said he did not believe pyæmia would show itself, the chills being like those that would attend blood poisoning excited fears that it had occurred. "I never thought so," said the doctor. "I knew it was not possible. None of the conditions favored blood poisoning. The president's system was healthy to begin with and has never been dangerously reduced. He has taken and assimilated nourishment enough to prevent that. The temperature and ventilation are the best possible and the treatment has been soothing. We have guarded against pyæmia. The formation of this pus cavity is not surprising and it is not impossible it may form. Of course the president is a very sick man and not out of danger but he is on the right track again."

ALL DOING WELL

EXECUTIVE MANSION, July 25, 1 15 p. m.—Dr. Bliss at 2 15 p. m., reporting that everything is going well. There has been no reappearance of fever and the president is sleeping quietly.

CONKLING'S COURTESY

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Ex-Senator Conkling accompanied by Senator Jones, of Nevada, called at the executive mansion at one o'clock p. m. and after talking with the president's private secretary, Brown, a few minutes went into the private part of the mansion to see Mrs. Garfield. Conkling remained fifteen or twenty minutes at the executive mansion. He said to Dr. Bliss that the recent unfavorable turn of the president's case had been a source of great anxiety to him and he called in person to inquire. Upon being informed that the symptoms were most encouraging he expressed gratification.

Mr. Conkling was looking in his usual health to-day, but appears a little graver than when the senate adjourned. He and Jones, of Nevada, were shown into the cabinet room. The president's private secretary was the only person in the room. Dr. Bliss was sent for. After the fact that ex-Senator Conkling had called was conveyed to the president, the visit was of short duration. Coming out of the White House ex-Senator Conkling said: "I am very glad to hear that the president is better."

NOT REMOVED FROM DANGER

PHILADELPHIA, July 25.—Dr. Agnew says the president looked yesterday much as when he saw him last. His condition is now about the same as before the incidental feature of the abscess showed itself. The chances of recovery are good but not removed from danger. Possible later changes in his condition may indicate the position of the bullet. None can tell anything about it now. There may be another chill, but no other complication is expected. His wonderful stamina and vigor will greatly aid in healing this new wound.

ENGLISH SYMPATHY

LONDON, July 25.—The Standard in an editorial says: "In England every incident of President Garfield's illness is watched with keen but mournful interest. Had he been a British statesman it would have been difficult for the English people to have manifested a truer sentiment of sympathy than that which they have extended to his family and country. In no part of the United States will the news that Garfield is out of danger be more joyfully received than in England. In no part of the union will the tidings of his death, should that melancholy event occur, excite a deeper or more genuine feeling of sorrow than it would produce throughout her Majesty's English speaking dominions."

COMMENT ON THE DOCTORS

WASHINGTON, July 25.—There is a good deal of comment on the fact that the operation which relieved the president was not made before yesterday morning. The attending physicians thought best to await the opinion of the consulting physicians. In the meanwhile the sack of matter, the great disturber, had been emptied by Dr. Bliss by the manipulation of his hand. It filled again, however, and showed the necessity of an incision. This was made as soon as the consulting physicians had examined the wound and pronounced that the proper course. Instead of the matter now having to traverse the elbow of the wound formed by the deflection of the ball after the rib was struck, it can be taken out directly through the incision, which is funnel shaped.

ACTION OF MALARIA

There is a manifest action of malaria about the White House. Charley Henley, the stenographer, has had it and for the past four or five days has been forced to succumb. He is now at home in bed. Office Coachman is in bed from the same cause. One of the doorkeepers is likewise down with it, and further one of the stablemen in the same condition.

TWO CURIOUS GIFTS

Two things arrived at the White House today worthy of note. One was a stuffed humming bird perched on the impossible little tree affected by the taxidermist. It came from Rhode Island, and was designed by the sender "To relieve the monotony of the sick room." How it could afford such relief not even Dr. Hamilton could tell. The other gift was a small box of alleged crackers. They were to "satisfy appetite and at the same time to impart much strength."—They looked and tasted like half cooked biscuits which had been allowed to harden.

Ex-Governor Evans has had at least one defender, the Denver Times. The Times is alleged to be the only independent paper in Denver.

The southern papers are, with hardly an exception, for the southern counties to decide on a place for the capital. San Juan is still to be heard from.

Denver merchants are now withdrawing their support from the Denver & New Orleans. They are willing to contribute to their own advantage, but do not wish to keep other cities at their own expense.

The funeral of Dean Stanley yesterday was a remarkable tribute to his memory. It was not paid to his high position in the church, but to the man. His large heart, broad views, and generous impulses had in a large degree made him one of the most popular Englishmen in his day. Despite the deference paid to rank in England, a true man regardless of titles birth and honor, may be esteemed and loved for himself. The possession of the highest place in the church would not have made his funeral more impressive or mourned the general sorrow.

DUTIES OF VICE PRESIDENT

The question is now being discussed whether the vice president may not act as president pro tempore during the illness of President Garfield and his inability to discharge the duties of his office. The constitution the views of its founders, and analogy are alike in favor of this. On this point the constitution has the following:

In case of the removal of the president from office or of his death, resignation or inability to discharge the powers and duties of the said office, the same shall devolve on the vice president, and the congress may by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation or inability both of the president and vice president, declaring what officer shall then act as president, and such officer shall act accordingly until the disability be removed or a president shall be elected.

Commenting upon the duties of the office of vice president in the Federalist Alexander Hamilton said:

The appointment of an extraordinary person as vice president has been objected to as superfluous if not mischievous. It has been alleged that it would have been preferable to have authorized the senate to elect out of their body an officer answering to that description. But two considerations seem to justify the ideas of the convention in this respect. One is that to secure all times the possibility of a definite resolution of the body it is necessary that the president should have only a casting vote. The other consideration is that, as the vice president may occasionally be called to act as substitute for the president in the executive magistracy, all the reasons which recommend the mode of election prescribed for the one apply with great if not equal force to the other. We [in New York] have a lieutenant governor chosen by the people at large, who presides in the senate and is the constitutional substitute for the governor in casualties similar to those which would authorize the vice-president to exercise the authorities and discharge the duties of the president.

The constitution certainly conceives of the vice president acting as president provisionally. It is not necessary that the office should be vacant by either death, resignation or impeachment of the president, for in that case he becomes president in fact. The vice president may act as president in case of the president's absence or illness, or any disability which might prevent his acting as president. That this view is in accord with those of the framers of the constitution is clearly shown by the above quotation from Alexander Hamilton, one of the framers, and the closest student and most earnest advocate of it. He says the vice president may occasionally become a substitute of the president. To make it clearer, he says the office is virtually one to that of the lieutenant governor. The lieutenant governor frequently exercises temporarily the functions of the governor. Last winter, to bring a test question before the courts, Governor Pitkin left the state. Lieutenant Governor Tabor went to the state house and exercised the authority of the governor. Then there was no question about the authority of the lieutenant governor to exercise the powers of the governor, but whether Mr. Tabor was lieutenant governor.

The above seems very clear. Should President Garfield's illness continue with no expected favorable results the vice president may act as president until President Garfield is well enough to discharge the duties of his office. It is true this never occurred before but this proves nothing. Vice President Arthur would simply be the first to exercise the functions of president as provided by the constitution in the life time of the latter. The importance of such a provision is apparent. Proper efficiency in the government in an exigency like this may demand that the duties of the president be discharged by the vice president. Owing to the splendid management of the different departments the administration of affairs has not been essentially embarrassed by the fact that the president was ill. But it is easy to conceive of such circumstances when the efficiency of the government requires the presence of the executive. At such a time the vice president should act.

DENVER'S DEEP DESIGNS.

Cappers for the Capital Pervading the Country.

SECOND PAPER.

The Secret Agent appeared to throw off a good deal of restraint as soon as the cars moved out of the Colorado Springs station. The reporter of the GAZETTE slipped into an unoccupied seat just behind him and pretended to sleep but kept a close watch all the while upon the Secret Agent who put his feet on the cushion of a reversed seat in front of him, took off his hat, removed his white necktie and his collar and took a huge chew of tobacco. He then gave himself up to the perusal of a manuscript. By the dim light of the car lamp the reporter managed to make out a portion of this document over the agent's shoulder. He read as follows:

SEALED INSTRUCTIONS TO SECRET AGENT.

These instructions have been carefully prepared by a committee of the Denver Chamber of Commerce and must be absolutely obeyed. They contain the combined wisdom of the committee and embody what is believed to be the best plan of manufacturing public opinion in favor of having the state capital located in Denver. The work you have undertaken is one of great arduousness as you will have literally to manufacture opinions south of the Divide in favor of Denver, for, as we are well aware, not the shadow of such a favorable opinion now exists. The work will be a delicate one for this reason we have deemed it necessary to prepare the following

GUIDE TO CONDUCT.

1. Be all things to all men. Explanation.—This means that you must throw off that patronizing manner which is so natural to Denver men and that you must not act as though Denver were the kite and the rest of Colorado the tail.

2. Be constant in season and out of season. Explanation.—This means that you must not rely on the past success of Denver in securing everything she wanted at the expense of the rest of the state. It means that you must work and not take things for granted. It also means as Tennyson remarks, that the south will rime out the old and effectually ring in the new.

3. When among the Romans do as the Romans do. Explanation.—This rule of action is akin unto the first rule but differs in that it is more specific. It means that when in Colorado Springs you should try to be like a Springs man or if you can't be like a Springs man be as much like a Springs man as you can. It means that in Pueblo you should act like a Pueblo man. It also means that when you get to Leadville you will have to act like an honest miner which will be something of a test of your histrionic ability.

4. Render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's. Explanation.—This means that the park policy is played out, in other words, that Denver can no longer afford to openly act the pig. It also means that you must pretend to see some good things in the towns south of the Divide. Of course no true Denverite believes there are any good things in the south but the south must be placated and public opinion manufactured.

5. Cast your bread upon the waters. Explanation.—This is the last command but on it hang all the law and the profits, and as you know Denver demands all the profits. Remember that (a) money makes the mare go and forget not that (b) cash talks, also hold fast in your mind that (c) silver argument convinces both but never by any accident (d) let your left hand know what your right hand doeth. In other words don't give it away for it is a serious matter to be detected in.

At this point a turn in the paper hid the rest of the matter from view and the Secret Agent, who appeared to be more familiar with this last rule than any of the others, folded up the document put it in his pocket and composed himself to sleep during the rest of the journey to Pueblo. Upon arriving in the smelter town a little after 2 o'clock in the morning the Secret Agent took the bus for the Indell hotel followed by his faithful shadow the GAZETTE reporter.

The next morning at half past eleven o'clock the reporter who had risen somewhat earlier saw the Secret Agent enter the office of the hotel. He was dressed in a carefully unstudied manner, wore a brusque business like air a slouched hat and a red neckties. He evidently thought he was doing in Rome as the Romans do. Observing the reporter who was artistically disguised as a Pueblo real estate agent the Secret Agent at once remarked:

"Delightful town this of Pueblo. Plenty of business going on."

"Yes, indeed," replied the reporter "big business boom here."

"I am mighty glad to get down here and meet a representative Pueblo man the very first thing. Do you know I drank some of that infernal Buxton water at the Springs, and I haven't got the taste out of my mouth yet. Let's go and drive a nail or two into our coffins."

After some explanation the reporter discovered that this was a fractious invitation to take a drink of whisky.

"Now," said the Secret Agent smacking his lips over the coffin nail "what do you people think down here over the capital question?"

"We think the capital should be south of the Divide, and also that it should be located in a booming city called Pueblo."

"Exactly, exactly, of course. You being a Pueblo man want the capital here, but don't you know they want it at Colorado Springs? Now, as a matter of compromise couldn't you split the difference and vote for Denver?"

"Perhaps I could if any reasons were shown why Denver should have it."

"Reasons! why reasons are thicker than blackberries. In the first place Denver is the natural ally of Pueblo. She is now doing all she can to increase Pueblo's prosperity. There should be some reciprocity. Pueblo should show her gratitude."

"Pueblo will not neglect her friends."

"No, of course not," said the Secret Agent, rubbing his hands together gleefully. "Pueblo will not forget Denver. Think how much she and the whole south owe Denver politically. Think how generous Arapahoe county has always been in the state conventions. Why it would be the blackest ingratitude for Pueblo to vote for herself as the site for the capital—besides, how immodest!"

"Very immodest?"

"Yes, and then it was through the efforts of Denver that you got the Insane Asylum here. Denver men recognized the propriety of the thing and worked like beavers to get you the Insane Asylum and to secure the appropriation of $60,000 for its improvement."

"We are very much obliged."

"Of course you are. You're pledged to be obliged. You can't help it any more than you can help voting for Denver." So saying the Secret Agent disappeared into the bar room with a satisfied smile on his face, and the bar tender was heard driving another nail in his coffin as he cracked some ice.

After this the agent went out upon the streets and began the active manufacture of public sentiment in favor of Denver. He drew a good street corner audience and advanced similar arguments to the ones already quoted, none of which were less logical or powerful, at times firing his heart with libations of whisky.

When the train pulled out for Canon City the Secret Agent boarded it, but he was not alone, the dark villain still pursued him. What happened at Canon City will be related next Wednesday.

William Hogarth

Kinsley's Magazine.

When about 14 years of age, Hogarth was apprenticed to Mr. Gamble. Mr. Gamble was an engraver at the Golden Angel, Cranbourne street. Mr. Gamble was an engraver on silver, so Hogarth's genius was for some years confined in bondage to a morbid taste for heraldic ornaments. He did not, however, as Mr. Herbert Spencer puts it, "adapt himself to his environment," but was very at the deprivation caused by hard work and prohibited hours of business, of his accustomed leisure. He could no longer go to Southwark Fair or Tyburn, though he might occasionally be enough to attend theatres by the Lord Mayor's show. He seems to have left London in 1720 and to have spent the four following years in illustrating squibs and drawing caricatures. In 1726 he illustrated Butler's "Hudibras." The pictures are coarse and rude but show signs of the prentice work of a master hand. At any rate, they brought him into relation with Sir Jas. Thornhill an eminent painter, with whose daughter he subsequently eloped. He then took a house at South Lambeth, the "Pilgrim's Progress" soon appeared and from that time to his death he was continually producing fresh pictures. As a man he seems to have been shrewd, jovial, and fond of company and amusement. His requirements of an entire order, were small. His immodesty was excessive. From his point of view the great painters of the sixteenth century were magnificent dunces. Frenchmen were particularly odious to him, as they were to Dr. Johnson and he regarded them with that peculiar abhorrence which yet lingers in the vulgar English mind. A well spread table loaded with a course plenty of food and to mind, rivulets of the strongest beer, formed the painter's Utopia of felicity and enjoyment. There is extant a long poem written by one of the party, recording a tour taken by Hogarth and four friends in the neighborhood of the Sheerness. It seems that they spent much of their time in drinking, smoking, and eating shrimps. The bill of fare at one inn visited by them consisted of 'rounds which might well astonish the present century. It is thus described in the flowing, but hardly elegant meter of Butler:

"In our first course a dish there was
Of soul and thunders with crabsauce,
A stuffed tench, a hen and besides
With pudding and a fat and liver pie
Green peas and to set off the matter
There also was much common diffuse
Fresh was the beer and sound the port

The Jews in Spain

Mr. H. Guedalla has received the following letter from the prime minister of the king of Spain. It will be observed that while fully establishing the right of the Jews to settle once more in that country (which has been exercised by a congregation at Seville and by Jews in Madrid and elsewhere), it gives no confirmation to the report of any special invitation having been offered by the king to sixty thousand or any other number of the Jews in Russia.

Presidency of the Council of Ministers, Madrid, June 7, 1881.—My respected sir:

With true satisfaction I have read your esteemed letter of the 20th instant, and in view of it I have to inform you that in fact of the constitution of Spain is the most decisive vocation of the edict of the banishment against the Jews in the year 1492. In virtue of that the government has never considered it necessary to give a special authorization for the coming of those who profess the religion, and less so when treating it from a purely liberal point of view, which interprets in the widest sense the precepts of the fundamental code of the state. Thus all your co-religionists who wish it can come to Spain without any obstacle whatever, being sure that the government, interpreting the opinion of the country, will receive them with kindness and sympathy. I profit by this opportunity to offer you the testimony of my distinguished esteem. Yours very truly, PRAXEDES M. SAGASTA.

To Mr. H. Guedalla, London.

The Coming Transit of Venus

The next transit of Venus over the sun's surface will occur on the sixth day of December, 1882, the last one having occurred December 9, 1874. At that time extensive preparations had been made all over the world and expeditions were sent to the most distant parts of Africa and America in order to test fully the improved instruments which the ingenuity of modern scientists have devised. On this account the transit of the coming year is doubly important, first, because all questions which the application of new instruments gave rise to all miscalculations or individual differences of observation among the astronomers who took part will be verified and set at rest and secondly because no other transit of the kind will not take place for a period of one hundred and twenty years, when the most incipient astronomers of our day will have been forgotten.

The question which is still left in doubt, and which the transit of 1882 can go far toward settling is the exact distance from the sun to the earth—an uncertainty which at present hinders all exact calculations concerning the magnitude of the whole solar system.

The first transits of Venus which were observed were those of 1631 and 1639, neither of which contributed anything to science. That of 1761, the next order, gave no valuable data, and its successor of 1769, although it excited much serious attention left the precise value of the parallax in doubt even at the time of the last observations on December 9th, 1874.

Then the event attracted universal attention, scientific observations were made at various points as far north and south as possible, and many valuable data were collected, which marks the only positive proof that can be given them during this or the coming century. For the following year still more extensive preparations are making, and there is every prospect now that the scientific results then to be obtained will settle all matters now in dispute or doubt.

Curious Autograph Letters

London Academy.

The Times states that in a collection of autograph letters sold by Messrs. Sotheby last week were several of interest. A long one of Queen Anne, of which she says, in alluding to party measures, "All I desire is my liberty in encouraging and employing all those yet concur faithfully in my service, whether they are called whigs or torys," sold for £16. One from Edmund Burke, in which he says he never wishes to see a brick of London again except on urgent duty, and that he does not much like it, with its fogs and its corruptions and its Jacobin peace. Those of Robert Burns brought some of the highest prices. In one, dated April 1, 1788, referring to the king's restoration, he says, "God forgive me for speaking evil of dignities! But I must say I look on the whole business as a solemn farce of pageant mummery." The MS of "The Rights of Woman," sold for £10 15s, and of the "Brigs of Ayr" for £5 10s. Letters of Thomas Campbell dated Sydenham Common, 1801, with parts of MS of "Lord Ullin's Daughter," include "What no choice is left. I must either publish or go to the Devil." £13 15s. Letter of Cardinal Henry Stuart, May 1787, Rome, in which speaking of his brother's visit to the Pope, he says of him "Could he but get the better of the nasty bottle which every now and then comes on by spirits I could hope a great deal, but I see to get the better of that nasty habit there must be the hand of God." £5 5s. A confession of faith signed by Montrose and other Scotch peers, written on vellum, sold for £56.

CHARACTER OF THE WOUND.

The Path of the Ball open to Inspection Through the Incision,

ANOTHER PAPER WITH DR BLISS

EXECUTIVE MANSION, July 15 9 p m. In an interview at 10 o'clock to-night Dr Bliss said the president has had a generally speaking, a very quiet and comfortable day There has been no recurrence of rigor and up to 3 p m the patient was entirely free from fever At that hour, however, the chill flushed rise began and continued until the evening examination, when the pulse reached about the maximum of 110 beats and a temperature of 101 8 degrees Since then both have slowly but steadily fallen This latest rise is the usual afternoon fever which the patient had all last week, and although it is more strongly marked to-day than previous to the formation of the pus cavity Saturday does not, in the judgment of the surgeons, point to any disturbance or indicate any unfavorable change It will probably subside entirely before morning The nourishment given to-day consisted of milk, beef extract and a little toast and was sufficient in quantity to fully maintain the patient's strength No anodynes were administered throughout the day, but the usual hypodermic injection of about one sixth of a grain of sulphate of morphia was given after dressing the wound this evening There has been a fairly copious discharge of pus from the new incision made yesterday and its character is perfectly healthy About two and a half tablespoonsful were obtained when the wound was dressed this morning and an equal quantity to-night besides that taken up by being absorbed in the cotton during the day The pressure upon the front wall of the abdomen increases the outflow and for that reason the amount discharged during the examination is much greater than that which flows naturally in the intervening interval is now open to observation through the new incision as far as the point where it passed between the ribs and which pressure is brought to bear upon the abdomen pus may be seen welling from the deeper part of the wound Communication between the mouth of the old wound and third of the new incision is still obtained by means of the drainage tube which passes in through one and out through the other and which at every examination is dried or pushed a stream of carbolized water from a fountain syringe

THE TRACK OF THE BALL

POSSIBILITY OF ANOTHER PUS CAVITY

In reply to questions Dr Bliss said that there is the possibility of the formation of another pus cavity though there is no reason to expect it The discharge is now free and uninterrupted Should, however, another cavity form its existence it would be at once indicated by a general constitutional disturbance which it would cause "There is no danger" he said, "of the formation of a pus cavity without the accompanying warning symptoms, such as a haggard and depressed expression of face, rigor and greatly increased fever These symptoms would at once show the nature of the disturbing influence" Upon being asked whether the blood could become poisoned by the interruption of pus contained in an enclosed cavity Dr Bliss said, "Healthy pus is not taken up by the blood and can not contaminate it It is only when the pus becomes disorganized and diseased that it is reabsorbed so as to cause pyemia"

The president has never at any time had symptom of pyemia and the time at which that complication is likely to occur is very nearly past Pyemia generally manifests itself before the end of the fourth week if at all We have no especial reason to apprehend it in this case and there has certainly been no indication of it yet

THE PRESIDENT HAS NO MALARIA

Attention was then called to the fact that five employes at the Executive Mansion are suffering from malarial fever or from malaria in some of its forms due to the condition of the Potomac flats below the city, and the question was asked him if the president was not to some extent affected and whether the apparent periodicity of the afternoon fever did not indicate the malarial influence. He replied that no symptoms of malaria had been observed in the president's case and that the regular recurrence of the fever between three in the evening and midnight is due to other causes. That surgical fever is always higher in the evening and lower in the morning About ten grains of quinine, he said, had been given to the president for two weeks past, but this had been done rather to tone up his nervous system than to counteract any supposed influence of malaria.

MYSTERY AND MAGIC.

Zamloch To-Morrow Night at Court House Hall.

Zamloch will begin his engagement in Court House hall to-morrow evening He is one of the best magicians now traveling and in addition to his entertainment gives away each evening a large number of valuable presents The capital prize will be a fine new American sewing machine, which will be presented to the holder of the winning ticket Saturday night All who attend during the week will be given a ticket on the sewing machine The tickets of admission are placed at the popular prices of the day, seventy five, fifty and twenty five cents, all of which have a chance in the distribution of gifts, and can be obtained at the music store of Aiken & Hunt

The Denver News speaks in the following complimentary manner of Zamloch

Now you see it—now you don't If such a is bewilder, let every unbeliever visit the Sixteenth street theater Monday night Zamloch, the mightiest magician of them all whose mystic wand has worked wonders throughout the world will open his cabinet of curiosities and change, transform, transmute, transfigure, transmogrify, transpose and entrance all things material and immaterial that come beneath his magic touch There is nothing more entertaining to the old as well as the young than a good exhibition of the prestidigitator art while if he delivers it unaided while if unaided he will fire, and at the same time makes possible what seems impossible Zamloch is unknown about town, but the old world, as well as the new, to be without a superior in his peculiar profession while in the way of novelty and bewildering feats he stands alone His extensive travel has afforded him an opportunity of seeing all the best performers in his line and his close application and indomitable perseverance have made him a close upon and surpass the models His effects are all new and his apparatus of the most costly and elaborate description In addition he distributes an endless amount of valuable presents every evening to his visitors which forms not the least attractive portion of his entertainment

Samuel E Bates, alias Buffalo Sam," was arraigned before Justice Bentley at 4 p m yesterday, charged with the larceny of a horse from Mr Slack, of Colorado City, during last May The prisoner waived the preliminary examination, and in default of the payment of $500 bail was committed to the county jail to await a hearing, at the next term of the district court

At half past 10 o clock yesterday an alarm of fire brought out the entire fire department. It was reported that the fire was in the northern part of the city, and the fire companies and the crowd ran in that direction After going as far as Dr Kimball's residence, on Nevada avenue, and not discovering any fire, all returned with the conclusion that the alarm was a false one It was subsequently learned that the alarm had been caused by a fire in the southern part of the city but it was extinguished by some ladies before much damage was done

Mr D Oliver Currie, one of the employees at Weir's mill on the Divide, met with quite a serious accident on South Tejon street Sunday evening He was riding on a vicious mule when the saddle cinch became loosened thus rendering it impossible for Currie to keep his seat He nevertheless retained his place some time or until the saddle slipped over the mule's shoulders when he was precipitated to the ground, striking his head against a hitching post When picked up he was unconscious and had a bad scalp wound above the left temple Mr Currie was able to be upon the street yesterday

Remember the excursion to the Grand Canon of the Arkansas on Thursday, under the auspices of the M E church This will be one of the best opportunities offered for the many strangers both here and at Manitou to see much of Colorado's grandest scenery Fare for the round trip, $4 50, for children, half fare Tickets should be purchased early in order to give the committee time to order a sufficient number of cars

Mr Charles C Kruse, foreman of the Tabor Hose company of Denver, paid the city a visit on Sunday for the purpose of looking at our new track and getting some necessary points on the tournament Mr Kruse informs us that the Tabor Hose company will be the only Denver hose organization that will be represented at the tournament by a team although the other companies will send delegations

Mr. William Heines, a prominent banker of Kansas City, accompanied by Mrs Heines, arrived in this city yesterday Mr. Heines purchased a half interest in the cigar store of Morris Sommer for his son F W Heines, who has been clerking for Mr Sommer The firm will be known as Sommer & Heines
